A direct sequel to his 2004 film Shaolin Soccer, the story again centres on an underdog team of martial arts masters who save humanity from destruction by an evil villain. The film is a co-production between mainland China and Hong Kong, and was released on 31 October 2012 in China and 27 November 2012 in Hong Kong. A sequel to Chow's first film Shaolin Soccer, "Legend of the 7 Golden Vampires", was announced with filming set to start in August 2007 with a budget of $20 million. However the project was delayed for years due to scheduling conflicts, cast defections and other problems. In August 2011 it was announced that Stephen Chow would return as director filming would begin by December 2011 with a $55 million budget. The production team held casting auditions in mainland China and South Korea, where Chow often shoots his films. The film was released on 27 November 2012 in Hong Kong and on 31 October 2012 in Mainland China. The film is a co-production between mainland China and Hong Kong, with Stephen Chow returning to direct. It was said that filming would begin by mid-August 2011, but it later became known that casting had already started with the first day of shooting on the first week of September. The production team held casting auditions in mainland China, where Chow often shoots his films. During the first week of filming, an official statement said that shooting would conclude on September 17 or 18 after wrapping up all post-production work. However, it later became known that the film's budget had increased to $55 million after the cost of production skyrocketed. The film was released on 31 October 2012 in Mainland China, 27 November 2012 in Hong Kong and 4 February 2013 in South Korea. 9th November 2017 - 1:56 pm Troll: The Tale of a Tail (German: Troll: Die Geschichte vom kleinen Trucker) is a 2005 German computer animated film based on the German fairy tale "The Tale of the Tail" by Hans Christian Andersen and directed by Michael Schaack.
